

February Honor Workers

Erika Boeckmann – Ericka has recently stepped up and taken the leadership role to make the work schedules for my other TAs and arranged the schedules for open lab times for the cell biology class. Ericka has a wonderful attitude for teaching and can relate to the underclassmen as they struggle with each new lab assignment. Ericka has been very reliable and I can count on her to get the job done. – Dr. Reid

Mariel Hildenbrand - Mariel is the epitome of a hard-working and professional young theatre artist. She goes beyond the call of duty to achieve her goals and to complete her tasks and does so with a smile. As a costume designer, she is meticulous and creative in the preparation of appropriate costumes for production and will go out of her way to find the most fitting apparel for each character. As a stage manager, she is on top of her game and displays the adept skill and time management that all professional stage managers need. She will go into the professional theatre world and will make Blackburn College very proud! – Mr. Sollish

Amanda Orzechowski - Amanda brings passion and creativity to her job, both of which are both absolutely necessary in the theatre. Despite having very little previous experience, she thrives in the theatrical environment and works very hard on every project she is given. She has great time management skills and brings an air of ease to her work in addition to a positive outlook and great comedic timing! As a stage properties designer, Amanda creates unique and appropriately creative products. She goes out of her way to make sure her props are well-built, painted, and durable. Additionally, Amanda is quick to take on additional tasks as needed and is always around when I need an extra hand. – Mr. Sollish

Congratulations, February honor workers!
